

THE NAKED TRUTH ABOUT AUSTRALIAN SINGLES REVEALED

Judith Wright Centre presents

OFTEN I FIND THAT I AM NAKED BY FIONA SPROTT

Anyone who's ever dreamt of perfect love but woken up hung over and naked in a stranger's bed is invited to laugh along at the world premiere of a new Australian comedy, Often I Find That I Am Naked, at Judith Wright Centre from Thursday 13 to Saturday 15 August 2009.

Often I Find That I Am Naked follows the life of Jezebel, a professional Australian woman who spends her time shopping, drinking cocktails and looking for love any way she can – speed-dating, Facebook, text sex, RSVP, STD clinics, rehab and even hiring a private detective.

Acclaimed producer and lead actor Jo Thomas says Often I Find That I Am Naked is a comical yet bold portrayal of the struggles many Australian women encounter in the dating world.

"What I love about the piece is the brutal honesty couched in humour, and I must admit I can relate to many of the dating disasters in this piece - maybe minus the rehab and private detective," she said.

"I also know many fabulous single women and men in their early 30s who say it's hard to find someone to connect with, and the eternal question seems to be "how do I meet people?" she said.

"Well, Jezebel has lots of ideas and lots of dating tips. She is willing to give anything a go!" she said.

Often I Find That I Am Naked is by critically acclaimed playwright Fiona Sprott, whose work has been produced across Australia and the UK, as well as in New York, Bulgaria and soon Brazil and Canada.

Directing Often I Find That I Am Naked is National Institute of Dramatic Art (NIDA) graduate Shane Jones, who has also trained in New York with Anne Bogart and the Saratoga International Theatre Institute and directed an array of works in Brisbane, Sydney, New York and Hong Kong.

Joining Jo Thomas on stage is local actor Sam Clark, a USQ graduate who has toured with theatre productions such as Newton's Law and Stick and Stones, and made TV guest appearances on Sea Patrol and Tightrope.

Often I Find That I Am Naked is complete with a live music soundtrack (including some catchy 80's tunes) performed by Tom Raymond of Doch and Miguel fame, and design by Matilda Award nominee and QUT Visual Arts graduate Kitty Taube.

Director Shane Jones says that although Often I Find That I Am Naked may appear as a humorous take on dating, the play also addresses societal issues of loneliness and isolation.

"Fiona's play is intensely funny; we look at the disastrous side of the dating game and Jezebel's journey through man after man treads a fine line between comedy and tragedy," Jones said.

"As Director it's also important for me to truthfully portray the loneliness often experienced in the search for that right someone to share your life's adventures with," he said.

Premiering this August at the Judith Wright Centre, Often I Find That I Am Naked is produced by Jo Thomas and the Judith Wright Centre. The creative development of this project was supported by FreeRange 2009, Metro Arts.

OFTEN I FIND THAT I AM NAKED - BIOGRAPHIES

FIONA SPROTT (PLAYWRIGHT)

After graduating from the University of Adelaide with a BA degree in Educational Theatre, Fiona co-founded performance company, Safe Chamber, with Jason Sweeney. The works produced by Safe Chamber were group devised pieces incorporating a process of rigorous research, writing, and development of audience-interaction concepts for creating a live experience in which the spectator was active witness and participant. Fiona began writing and performing monologues as part of her work with Safe Chamber and then embarked upon an independent career as a soloist writer-performer.

After performing her first major solo show in 1996, for Brand X Theatre, (Partly it's about love, partly it's about massacre.), she moved into working exclusively as a playwright/writer for other performers/companies and has enjoyed a moderately successful national and international career, which continues today. Her work has been produced in Adelaide, Sydney, Melbourne, Canberra, the UK repeatedly, New York (fringe), Bulgaria (Sofia, National Theatre), and will be produced in Brazil, and Canada during 2009/10.

Her other key area of work is with young people, through youth theatre companies, and with professional companies producing work for young audiences, such as SA based Budgie Lung Theatre Company, Urban Myth, DFaces (Whyhalla), and Southern Youth Theatre Ensemble. In 2009 she will be working on Gift/Back with Unreasonable Adults, a commissioned work for the Come Out Festival. The work is usually commissioned with a brief to explore topics of sexuality, depression, and suicide and the projects in question have often involved an educational or health related organisation. She is currently researching and developing a concept for a children's drama series (for television).

She now works with Unreasonable Adults, and Unreasonable Films, as one of the Project Leaders, and as company writer, with whom she explores the construction of creative material based upon interpretation of research, and theoretical texts, or critical ideas. She completed her Master of Creative Arts in 2009, on the topic Single Girls and Serial Killers: Sex, Slaughter and the City. From this material Unreasonable Adults worked up a range of performed "essays", one of which was commissioned by Robert Pacitti (the Pacitti Company) for the inaugural SPILL Festival of Contemporary Performance, in London, 2007.
